Tales of Character: Enhancing Values and Creative Skills through Grade-Wide English Storytelling

2025-2026 Academic Year

Overview

Tales of Character: Enhancing Values and Creative Skills through Grade-Wide English Storytelling

Learning character and proper values through storytelling is a wonderful way to engage children and help them understand important principles. Stories have the power to teach values that shape good character. Through stories, children can develop a deeper understanding of the importance of different virtues that contribute to their character development. Each book highlights a positive value recommended by EDB.

Organisers + Project Leaders

This project is jointly presented by Story Jungle Education Centre and JEMS Character Academy to utilise grade-wide English storytelling sessions to promote the cultivation of moral values and character.

English Education

Since 2002, Story Jungle has collaborated with over 100,000 students, 80 schools, and 2,000 teachers and parents for kindergarten, primary, and secondary levels. Story Jungle believes language is the foundation for self-directed, cross-curriculum learning, and values and character education.

Vivian Chung

- Founder & Principal, Story Jungle Education Centre
- Founder & Co-chair, Story Seeds (formerly REACH)
- Reading Specialist
- School Consultant
- Graduate, Columbia University Teachers College

Character Education

With over 15 years of experience in character education, JEMS Character Academy is a premier learning institute that focuses on developing character values in children aged up to twelve. Through innovative and creative curriculum design, students learn to reflect on, critically think about and developmentally develop in their character.

Christine Ma-Lau

- Founder & Principal, JEMS Character Academy
- Founder & Co-chair, Character Education Foundation
- Adjunct Professor, The Education University of HK
- Graduate, University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Education

Project Objectives

This project's objective is to help students grow in their English literacy, promote their moral values and to encourage creativity while incorporating English skills sets such as analysing story elements, fostering critical thinking, and promoting effective communication.

English learning highlights:

Reading
Writing
Speaking
Comprehension
Vocabulary
Role Play

English Storytelling

Story-based learning is a powerful and proven teaching method that stimulates students' attention, memory and emotions. The method helps students emotionally connect to their learning, allowing them to relate and master new vocabulary and concepts more effectively.

Character values highlights:

Care (P1)
Empathy (P2)
Diligence (P3)
Resilience (P4)
Responsibility (P5)
Respect & Gratitude (P6)

Character Education

Character development is an essential part of having self-awareness, self-worth and being able to relate to and connect with others. The character and proper values highlighted in this project form essential core values that lead to personal and social wellbeing.

Creativity

Students are free to express themselves and unleash their creativity and imagination by creating individual visual representations that relate to the stories and moral values explored during the storytelling sessions.

Project Scope:

With continuous project support throughout the academic year

Character-Based Storytelling Sessions

- For P1 to P6
- 1.5-hour sessions for each grade
- Interactive English storytelling sessions on character and proper values
- Unique book and value highlight for each grade

Teacher Training

Testimonials

I am delighted to endorse the exceptional work of Story Jungle and JEMS Character Academy's collaborative English storytelling programmes. In my extensive experience teaching and observing literacy teaching activities in schools, I have found their Story-Telling approach highly fruitful. Their expertise and dedication are highly commendable, and I am confident their work would bring new impetus, elevating diverse students' English skills while nurturing their character development through the transformative power of storytelling.

-Professor Carol Chan,
Tales of Character Project Consultant, Honorary Professor,
Faculty of Education, The University of Hong Kong

[Story Jungle & JEMS] have a unique gift for crafting dynamic, immersive narratives that not only captivate our students, but also effortlessly integrate English language development with the teaching of important character traits like empathy, integrity and resilience. The outcomes of Story Jungle's programmes have been truly transformative. We have witnessed tangible and measurable growth in our students' English language skills, including significant improvements in their speaking abilities, confidence, and overall command of the language.

-Ms. Chan Man Yee, Principal
Pooi To Primary School

JEMS and Story Jungle delivered a valuable and enjoyable character education experience to our students, leaving a positive impact on them. The programme proved to be a perfect fit for our students. The captivating stories matched the age groups of the two grades of students who attended. The sessions were held at a good pace, and the interactive role-play fostered student participation and confidence.

-Ms. Doris Yuen, Principal
Maryknoll Convent School (Primary Section)

The teacher effortlessly captivated the attention of 160 students, creating an atmosphere of excitement and enthusiasm. Her facilitation techniques were masterful, ensuring that every student felt engaged and actively involved in the lesson. The passion and energy she brought to the session were contagious, igniting a genuine love for learning in the hearts of the students.

-Ms Yau Shuk Ling, Teacher-Librarian
Li Cheng Uk Government Primary School
