When should we introduce a second language?

- There is no doubt that we should introduce a second language -- there are clearly documented benefits of bilingualism.

- Argument 1 - We should introduce the second language early.

- Argument 2 - We can introduce the second language later.
We should introduce the second language early:

We should introduce the second language early:
Evidence from early brain development

- There is rapid brain development in the early years and development of particular areas is associated with language.

- Environmental factors affect brain development.

- The human brain has an amazing capacity to learn more than one language and the toddler knows which language to use with whom.
We can introduce the second language later

- Adults can learn a second language more effectively than children.
- What are some of the prevailing myths?

Approaches to early foreign language instruction

- Natural versus acquired bilingualism
- Children learn the foreign language simultaneously or successively
Approaches to early foreign language instruction

Language Immersion

- A method of teaching a second language in which the is used as the medium of instruction to teach curriculum content
  - Early immersion: age 5 – 6 years
  - Middle immersion: 9 – 10 years
  - Late immersion: 11 – 14 years

  - Total immersion
  - Partial immersion
  - Two-way bilingual immersion
- Trilingual immersion/approach
- English as a subject

Approaches to early foreign language instruction
Language Immersion (Bilingual Education)

- Bilingual education is instruction in two languages and the use of those two languages as mediums of instruction for any part, or all of the school curriculum (Andersson, Boyer, & Southwest Development Laboratory, 1970)
- Content and delivery are in two languages
- Excludes programmes where second language is taught as a subject
- Distinction between transitional and maintenance bilingual education programs
Approaches to early foreign language instruction
Research Findings

- Two-way bilingual immersion programs are successful frameworks (in US and other studies)

Trends in Early Childhood foreign language pedagogy

General trends in Early Childhood pedagogy

- Contrasting trends in Asia and the West
- Emphasis on learning standards and accountability
- Increase in digital media in school and home
- Evidence-based curriculum with literacy and mathematics focus (in western contexts; in eastern contexts more emphasis on play-based learning)
- Higher teacher qualifications \(\rightarrow\) pedagogy

Trends in advice about pedagogy for dual language learning

Recommended Best Practices for Dual Language Immersion Programmes

- Curriculum (philosophy and intentionality)
- Professional development of teachers
  - Additional coursework on language and literacy development theory and strategies for working with young children who are learning a second language
  - Language courses designed for early educators to enhance their own proficiency
  - Certification of teaching the other language
- Work with families
Trends in advice about pedagogy for dual language learning

- Oral language is the foundation for literacy skills
  - Listening, speaking, reading and writing

- Reading and Writing
  - Support the development of phonological awareness
  - Encourage emergent literacy
  - Talking dictation
  - Choice of books – literature as curriculum

The situation in Hong Kong

- Teaching of English in Hong Kong kindergartens is pervasive
- Bilingual environments
- Wide variations in teacher qualifications
- English is taught as a “subject”
- English homework

Recommendations for Instruction for Second Language Acquisition (Ellis, 2008)

2. Focus on meaning/form
3. Provide opportunities to talk
4. Cater to individual differences
5. Frequent assessment

Unanswered questions

1. What is the best age to introduce English as a foreign language to young learners? – It depends on...
2. What are the most important teacher characteristics and qualifications?
3. What is the best pedagogical approach?
3. How much time per week should we allocate to English instruction? What should we focus on?
4. What about reading and writing?
Unanswered questions
So what should we do?

Evidence based decision-making

1. Introduce language early and introduce it well.
2. Use immersion models
3. Have a high quality “intentional” curriculum
4. Have qualified teachers
5. Assess children’s competence
6. Garner family and community support

9. Conclusions
Conclusions

“Children enter preschool rich in their own language and the important teaching builds on that strength rather than immersing children in a new language and ignoring the language and literacy development they have experienced so far.”

“When young children are learning more than one language, both languages follow the typical development process and this does not cause language disorders or substantiative language delays.”

(Youngquist & Martinez-Griego, 2009)

Sometimes factors other than “evidence” will influence policy but all educators are guided by the best interest of the child
